Our Mission The mission of St. Hedwig's Church is to provide a welcoming and meaningful environment for everyone. We believe that St. Hedwig's is a faith community that is rooted in our heritage and united by our shared commitment to Christ-centered traditions. Tuesday, April 2, 2012 The impact of our summer class trip to the Art Institute of Chicago It's hard to believe that our class has been in Chicago for almost two weeks. The trip has been a huge success for all participants. They have been amazed by the Museum, the architecture, the educational experience. However, the most unexpected impact has been created by our time as a community. As we have been waiting for the cab (and bus) to take us to and from the train station, we have been having conversations about our favorite places in Chicago. Most of us have taken bus or cab rides from our Chicago apartment/apartment buildings to various places throughout the city. However, we have never had one of our apartment dwellers (or bus passengers) take a cab from our apartment building to various destinations. As time passed and we finished our classes, the conversations turned to a subject that seemed to be on everyone's mind: who has had the most interesting experiences with the police/the Cab driver? It seems that everyone is talking about their cab rides! Most of the bus passengers have very short experiences with cabs. However c9d1549cdd

. The Caribbean Sail. The folks on the guest columnist and I corresponded a few times on Twitter and in email just before leaving New Zealand. He got to the new age of self-starting sailing and I decided to join him as we sailed into the unknown at 30 knots. Simon and I, before the departure for Round-the-world sailing Here's our part 2... reasonably priced baggage allowance to the Caribbean from Heathrow. I land Heathrow and my bags go straight in to the carousel for the first time in ten hours and I am astounded to see that somehow my bike bag is all rusted up. The frame had a very cool roll cage design and, as we were crossing the Atlantic, I had made a strip or two of thick webbing to add across the back of the seat. I had not imagined over a year in transit to corrode and corrode and corrode and corrode but the bottom section that forms the back was totally gone. Panicked, I took it out of the suitcase before taking the bag through customs. I wrap the bag round some cardboard and head out to the 'skype cheap in London' booking office to book a cheap flight home. Needless to say I got home safely and was able to replace the frame, the frame in need of, yet again, replacing. This is the fifth South Atlantic crossing that I have done, albeit one over three months, and while I sailed again with my dad and Pete's team, it was a solo at-sea solo. I spent some of the later part of the day wishing I could have joined them. We quickly found ourselves in the Atlantic once again, our 'god' to the south of the equator. Eventually, we reached Barbados after nightfall on December 7. Having spent the night in our first Caribbean country (Martinique), much to our amazement, we landed in Barbados for 10 hours. Fittingly, Barbados welcomed us with a strong and challenging swell. Pete and I had had a look at this forecast and had given the forecast some thought. This was a summit swell at the back (Southern Hemisphere) of the hurricane season so we figured we could spend a few days

Autoradiographic localization of muscarinic receptors of the rat brain. Muscarinic receptors in rat brain were located by a combination of receptor binding assay and autoradiographic techniques. (3H)-Scopolamine and (3H)-oxotremorine were used to label the receptors. Autoradiography revealed that the distribution of receptor binding sites in rat brain is similar to the distribution of the muscarinic antagonists, pirenzepine and atropine, which are known to bind to muscarinic receptors. The results also suggest that muscarinic receptors are divided into three subtypes, M1, M2, and M4, each having specific subcellular distribution.
